A hand is shown from the top, holding a small green plant that is growing out of a crack in a red, textured surface. The surface is covered in many small, dark, irregular marks, resembling scratches or debris. The overall color scheme is dominated by red, with the green of the plant providing a stark contrast.

Synopsis book

How do survivors of child abuse, bullying, chronic oppression and discrimination, and other developmental traumas adapt to such unimaginable situations? It is taken for granted that experiences such as hearing voices, altered states of consciousness, dissociative states, lack of trust, and intense emotions are inherently problematic. But what does the evidence actually show? And how much do we still need to learn?
